Like drunkenness, it is difficult to shake off this injurious habit, for, spite of all assertions to the contrary, there can be no doubt it has a deleterious effect when indulged in to any appreciable extent, and there are few who are wise enough to limit themselves to a strictly moderate use of it. It is in the abuse of the drug that the evil chiefly lies. But it is a thing to beware of, for it is well nigh as seductive to the Chinaman as the wine cup to the Caucasian. And both have their devotees, and both reward them too frequently with utter ruin. Yet neither can be put down by legislation, and while all benevolent people must mourn the havor wrought by both, they will do well to advocate remedial rather than prohibitory General. measures, which invariably defeat their own object.

Extracts. - YOUTH AND AGE. When I was young there seemed to be No pleasure in the world for mer My fellows found it every where, ___ Was mone so moor but had his share They took mine, too! I sought in valua it was my fate To be too carly, or too late: The nest was there, the bird was flown,-Ah why? and to what golden zone? It youth but knew Why art thou, Youth, so swift, so slow Why dost thou let thy pleasures go? All that they group thy hands let fall;

The best they do not group at all, Do not pursue! ... What lingles in my blood like wine? Those tender eyes that turn to mine, The soft tears in my eyes that start. Tell me, what does it mean, my heart? If youth but knew

Now I am old there seems to be No pleasure in the world for me; But value regrets for what is past, Because I did not hold it fast. Because it flew!

That youth is weak, and ago is strong, Should be the burden of my song, And might be in my happier hours, If autumn leaves were summer flowers, If age could do! Mock not my sighs, and my white hair, O Youth, so foolish and so fair

The lear and slippered pantaloon Awnita thee, too! Be wise, delay not, oh make haste! Go, steal your arm around her weist; The reschud month begins to blow ; Stoop down and kiss it.—so, boy, so!

Remember, life is not all June;

If age could do ! Dum vivimus, the wise men say, And you can do it as well as they; So live and love, then, while you can, Nor sigh, like me, when you are a man, "If youth but knew!"

Far better be where Folly dwells.

ORIGIN OF HUMAN DULNESS. Jupiter, when he authorised Prometheus to manufacture a sufficient number of mortal men and women out of the appropriate clay, presented him with a fixed quantity of brain, which he was to distribute fairly among the whole human race. Prometheus, however, was most extravagant in his disposition of this brain amongst the mortals whom he produced; and after a time, to his dismay found the supply falling short, while the multiplication of men and women went on at an ever-increasing rate. In this strait ho bethought himself of the existence of an small amount of the original brain, he contrived to turn out as many generations of VOLTAIRE. Discontented with his surname of Aroust which he received from his father, he chose another more supponious, borrowing it from a small property which his mother possessed in Poltou. This piece of vanity offended the Chevalier de Rohan, and meeting Voltaire at Subscribed Capital the opera: "Ah ca," said he to him, "how are you to be addressed? Is it to be Monsieur Arouet, or Monsieur de Voltaire?" "Monsieur le Chevalier," replied Voltaire "it is better to make one's self a name than to sully that which has been given to us. The chevalier resolved to be avenged. One day, when Voltaire was dining with the Duc de Sully, the servants told lim that a carriage was waiting for him at the door. He went down immediately, and was seized by the footmen, who struck him repeated blows with their sticks. The chevalier, seated in side the carriage, watched the proceedings. and encouraged his servants by his approving words. "Strike, strike!" shid he; "only take care of his head; something good may come out of it."

NEW ZEALAND "LADIES." The sudden transformation of a servant girl into a grandly dressed lady is sometimes quite startling. "Not very long ago." says Mr. Bathgate, "I noticed a girl, whom I chanced to know had come to the colony as an assisted immigrant, sitting in full splendour, with closk, bouquet, and fan, beside her husband in the front row of the dress circle at the Italian Opera!" Unfortunately, it is easier to decorate the person than cultivate the mind. In the wrong use of phrases Mrs. Malaprop is beaten hollow. girl who had been developed into a lady was heard to speak of getting an "antimonio" dress, meaning a dress of moire antique. Another gave it as her opinion "that the mayor of their town should wear a scarlet robe lined with vermin," meaning, of course, ermine. Male immigrants who have come suddenly into wealth are apt to make similar mistakes. One night, at a public supper-party; an individual sat opposite to a dish of pates de foie gras, which rare and costly dish he persisted in calling "potted photographs." Chambers's Journal,
